Hailing from Girona and based in Barcelona, Martí Rovira Pujol is a multidisciplinary artist, DJ and music producer whose practice moves between sound, live performance and visual art. His work is an extension of his inner world, translating emotions, curiosity and personal experiences into tangible forms through sound and image.

Under his musical project Martini Raw, he explores music as an open and constantly evolving language. His sets can move from energetic club environments and hybrid live performances to downtempo, ambient and deeply meditative spaces. Drawing from house, techno, electro, breaks, jazz, dub and experimental music, his approach is less about genre than about creating a particular atmosphere and emotional connection.

His practice extends beyond the traditional dancefloor, embracing listening sessions, audiovisual experiences and more immersive, contemplative or exhibition-oriented contexts. Whether in a club, a listening room or an intimate space, his intention remains consistent: to express, connect and create experiences that invite people to feel, listen and be present.

Martí is a resident at Audiodise and Studio Stereo Club , and a member of echo-echo, a sound collective exploring collective listening and experimentation. Alongside his DJ practice, he develops his own music, ranging from club-oriented productions to downtempo and meditative compositions.

Across all these forms, Martí's work is driven by the same pursuit: turning an emotional landscape into something shared, physical and tangible.
